By ...It's entertaining but disturbing that the American counterparts to The Shopping Bags, Helen Buttigieg, Ayse Hogan and Gail Vaz-Oxlade are so irresponsibly pro-spending. Even the declutter shows involve shopping. The Canadian hosts seem less plastic and better spoken. The only American host with responsible advice in my recent memory is the real estate consultant Kirsten Kemp from Property Ladder who regularly discourages real estate flippers (remember them?) from installing too fancy renovations that will not increase the sale price of the property and really seem to be more about the vanity of the flipper. The Shopping Bags are worth attending to because not only do they not always pick the most expensive option but they also give good reasons and share research on why fancier options are a bad idea. For a media product, they are actually educational. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. If you're a consumer who often winds up feeling ripped off in the shopping world... By Midwest Book Review If you're a consumer who often winds up feeling ripped off in the shopping world, you must turn to THE SHOPPING BAGS: TIPS, TRICKS AND INSIDE INFORMATION TO MAKE YOU A SAVVY SHOPPER for insights. It offers advice on shopping for food, home, or entertainment alike, from power tools to dryers, and adds flair and fun to the process. Explanations of what to look for, desirable and undesirable features, and common problems in product lines make for invaluable references. Diane C. Fabulous Find By Donny At first glance, I thought this book was going to be about fashion, like the zillions of others on the shelf. But it contains lots of helpful information about buying all kinds of products. I especially liked the food section and the everyday items section. Definitely recommend it as it has lots of little known facts. I understand these ladies have a show and I'm going to be checking my TV listings to find it!

Consumer experts Anna Wallner and Kristina Maticic feel the pain of ripped-off shoppers. Hosts of the award-winning TV show The Shopping Bags, they've tested hundreds of products to teach consumers how to shop smart—at the mall, the grocery store, or the electronics superstore. They've even gone rock climbing to prove that expensive nail polish chips just as easily as the cheaper brand. Now, with their own zany flair, "The Shopping Bags" put their smart shopping tools at consumers' fingertips in their debut book, including: - The ten shopping commandments - How to spot deceptive sales tricks - Profiles of common purchases, from lipsticks to lawnmowers, lightbulbs to lingerie - What to ask before buying a product Filled with celebrity tips from the likes of Martha Stewart and Diane von Furstenberg, this hip, handy guide will make sure consumers never feel ripped off again.
