Michael W. Robbins : Whole Green Catalog: 1000 Best Things for You and the Earth before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Whole Green Catalog: 1000 Best Things for You and the Earth:

2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. it's a good idea that came off the presses too soon By Holly I have the original whole earth and this Green catalog is far less concentrated and relatively shallow in depth. it's a good idea that came off the presses too soon. It's a good idea, but a lot of wasted space and show. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Love this book By Sarah This book has an unbelievable amount of information in an easy to read format. It's more like a guide split up in sections so you can hop around through the book, rather than reading straight through. It recommends companies that are committed to sustainable practices and I love that too because many of these companies are not large or well known where people would already know about them. I take this book with me all the time and read through it if I'm waiting for the kids. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. good idea

By alwaysmama I can't wait to give this to my daughter-in-law. She will really like it. Scanning through, it seems to have loads of information all captured in one place.

As interest in living a sustainable life has exploded, so has the green marketplace. It has become difficult to distinguish companies that provide truly eco-friendly products and services from those that "greenwash." Now, from the company that founded Organic Gardening when eating close to the land was far from mainstream and published Al Gore's An Inconvenient Truth, comes this timely guide to all things green. Modeled on the classic Whole Earth Catalog, the touchstone for an earlier generation, Whole Green Earth Catalog is poised to become the bible of green living for the 68 million Americans about one-third of U.S. adults who now take environmental and social issues into account when they make purchases. Leading experts in every imaginable category from home furnishings and appliances to clothing and children's toys, from pets and beauty products to travel and investing share their authoritative tips, reviews, and advice. Whole Green Catalog - Edited by Michael W. Robbins, Designed by Wendy Palitz - provides succinct answers to such questions as: Can one go green and save money? Can people reduce their carbon footprint if they are business travelers? Is there an environmentally friendly disposable diaper? Beautifully packaged with more than 1,000 photographs and illustrations, and manufactured with 100 percent post-consumer waste materials, this volume is the perfect gift for those who care about the future of the planet.
