Awesome Book!!!By TheHarlequin13I've been a traveler for years, hobo'ing around the US and hitching, working my way around- and I bought this book because I have been thinking of backpacking through Europe. This is a great and helpful addition to any traveler's library, with simple ideas that even I hadn't thought of!! My only complaint is that there could be a little more focus on the USA, but its quite understandable. Definitely a worthwhile buy!0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Excellent Book For Prospective AdventurersBy Lucia T. MillerFor a young person who wants to experience life in other cultures for a few months or a year, possibly before starting college or as a break from college this book is filled with exciting ideas. Actual reports from other young people who have suggestions to add to the text make it great food for thought.Since it is written by a British citizen the terminology may occasionally seem obscure.It is lively, witty, easy to understand.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Great ideas, a little outdatedBy crThis book has lots of good ideas for working while traveling and traveling cheap, but I wish I knew to get the new edition. The book itself says to use an edition no more than 2 years old, and this one is 5 years old so the websites and phone numbers are not guaranteed to be up to date--not to mention the book talks about saving computer files on floppy disks..... regardless, I am getting good ideas from it.

This guide for the working traveller incorporates hundreds of first-hand accounts and offers advice on how to find work around the world, either in advance or on the spot. It includes expanded sections on working opportunities in Hong Kong and Eastern Europe, arranging a contract on a cruise ship, childcare jobs worldwide including in Australia, fruitpicking from France to New Zealand and new voluntary projects in Latin America. Plus updated information on how to work a passage, dates and details of harvests, how to become a barmaid, pineapple picker, ski-tow operator and English teacher.
